was the core of James Manley.

James enjoyed working on special projects or taking road trips with his best friend, Donnie. You rarely would see one without the other. He enjoyed fixing up old lawn mowers and giving them away to friends and acquaintances.

He was a man of few words but he was truly a gentle giant in his own right. If you were in his presence, you didn't have to worry because you were safe. He was a great protector of many. His, was a life well-lived, and his memory will be cherished for generations to come by all who had the pleasure to know him. In his words, "It will be okay".
